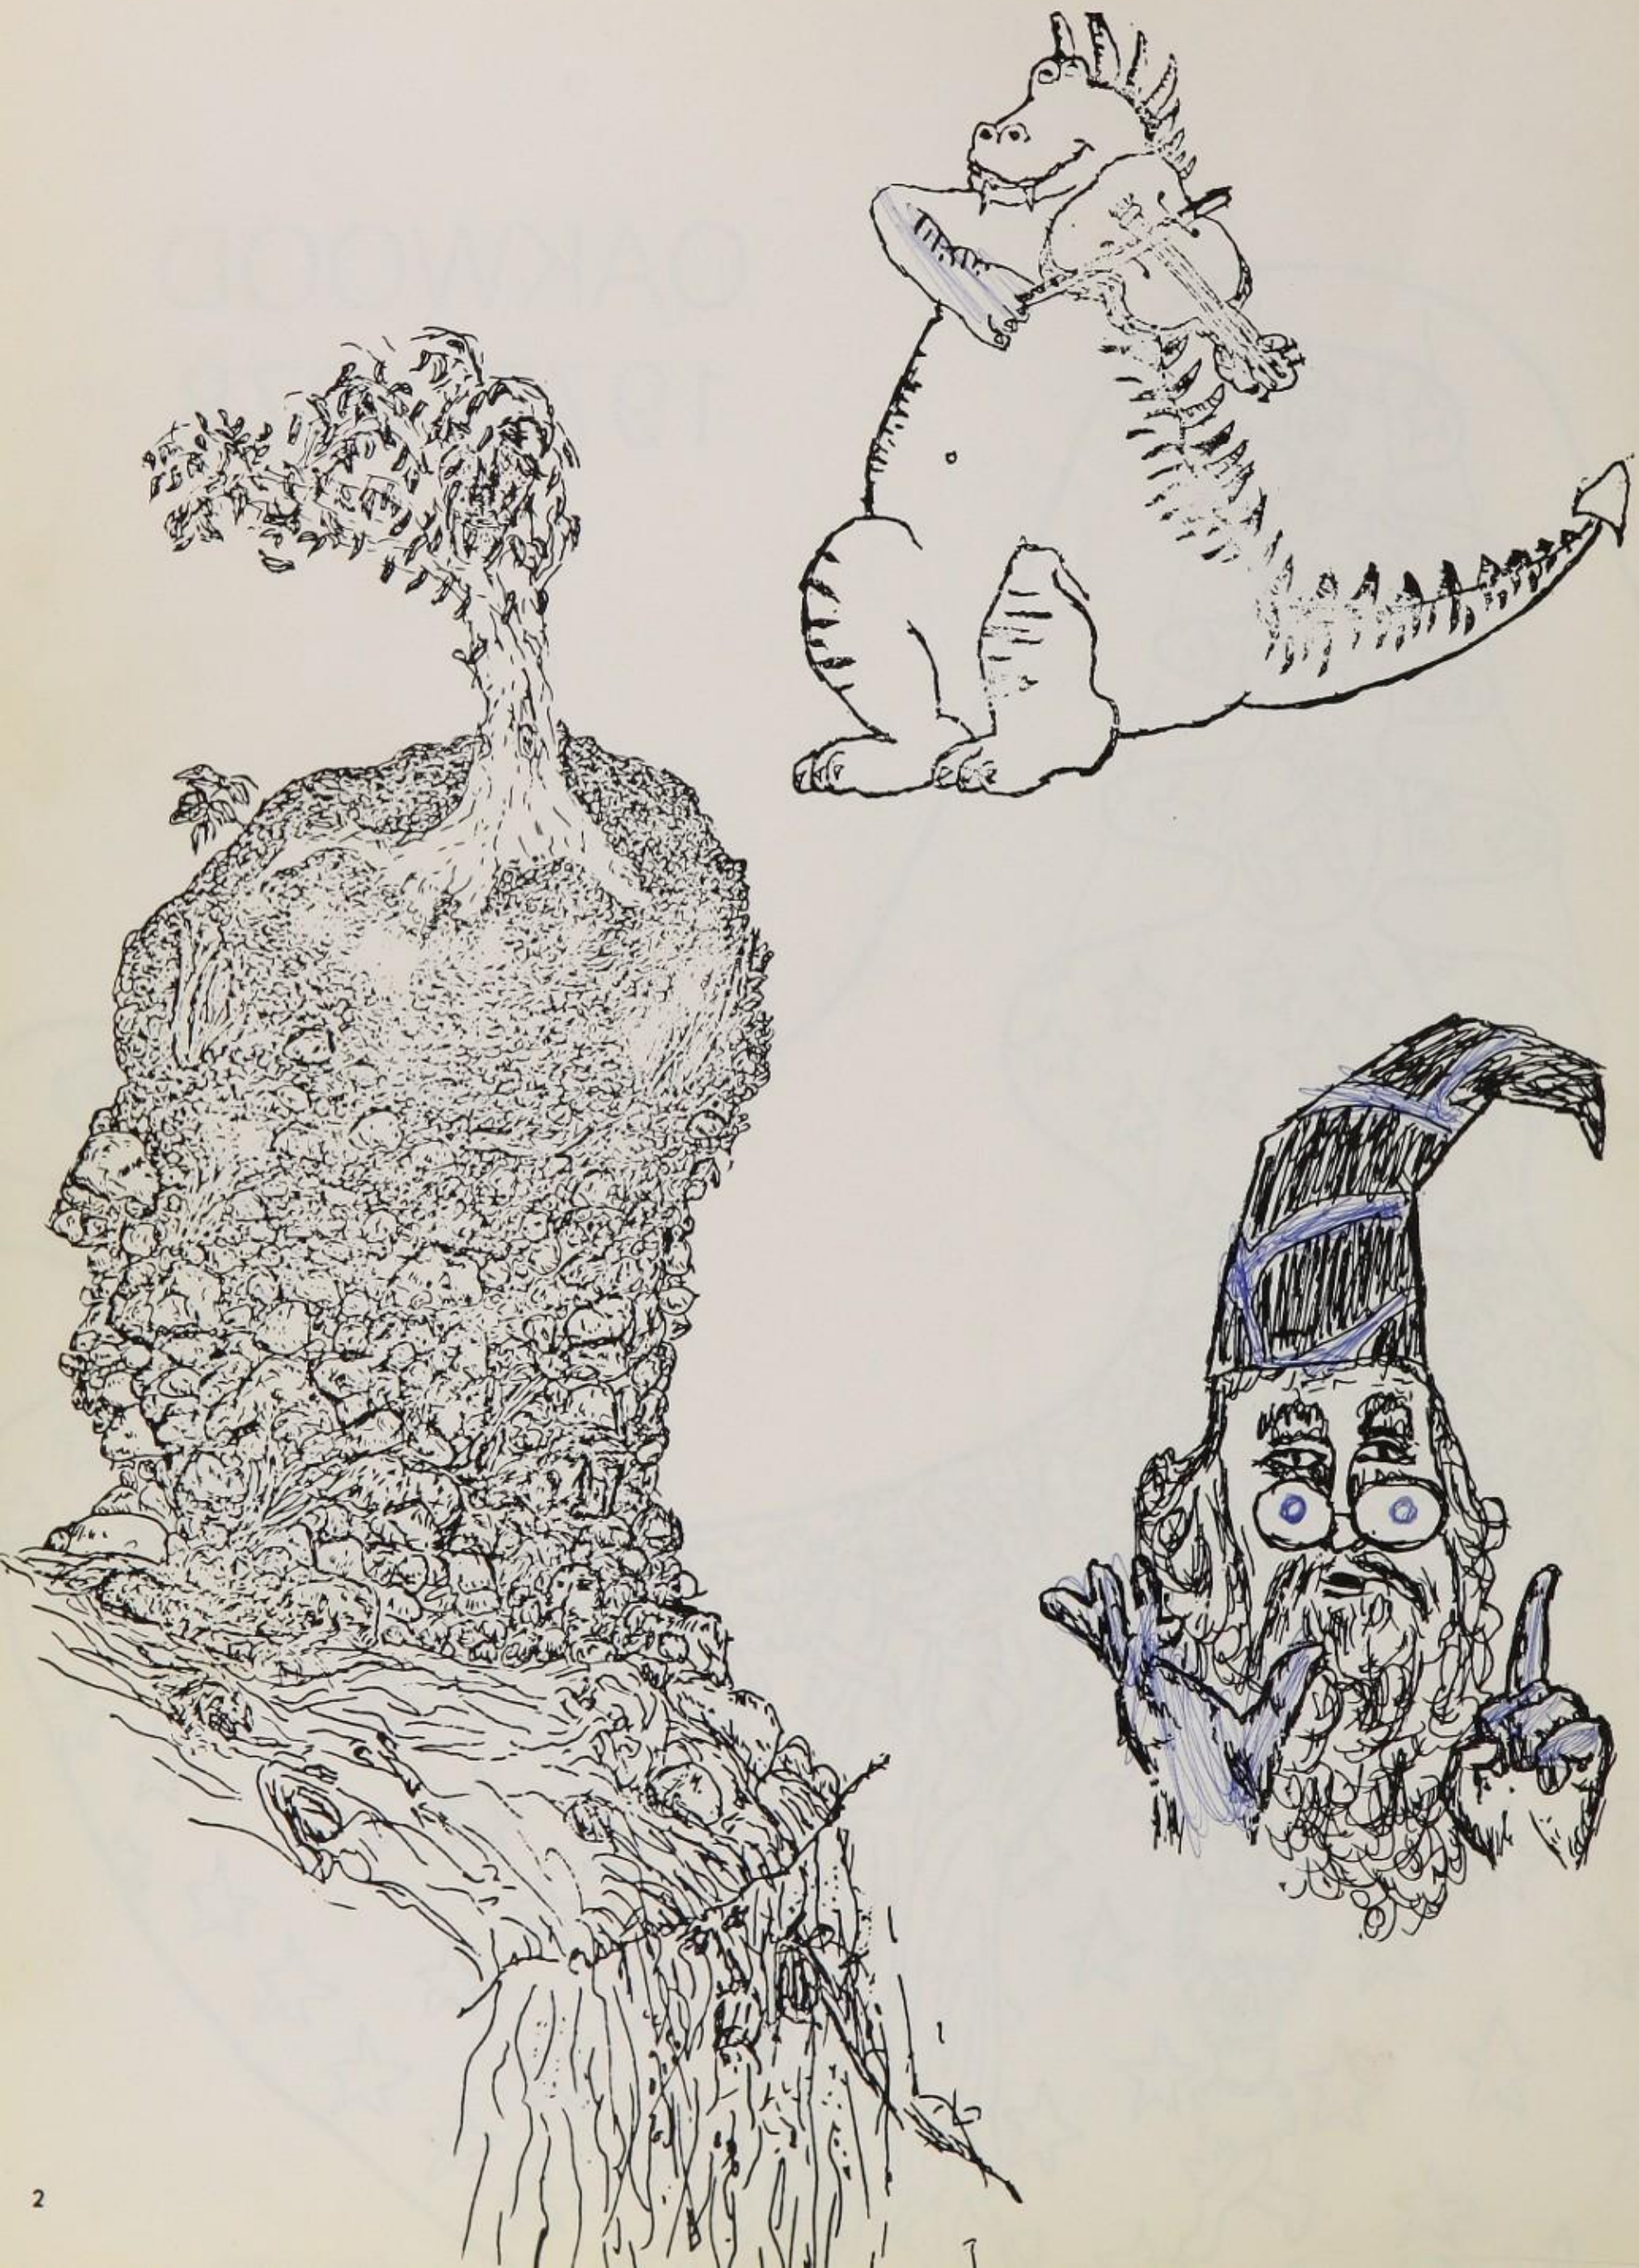
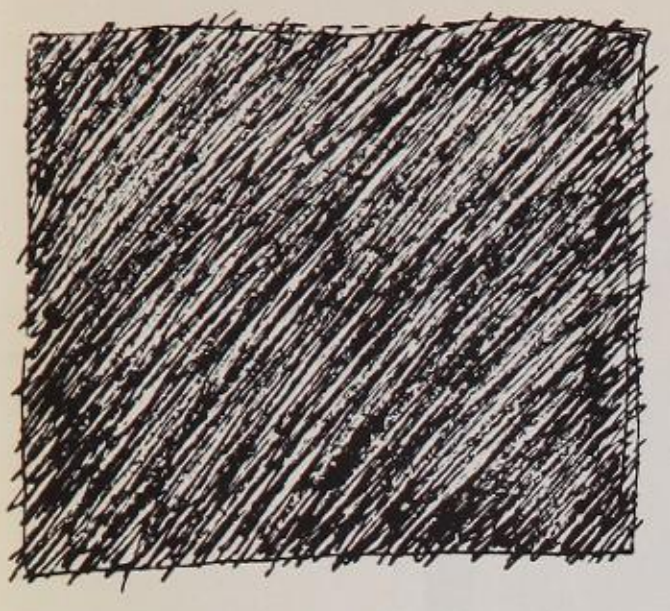
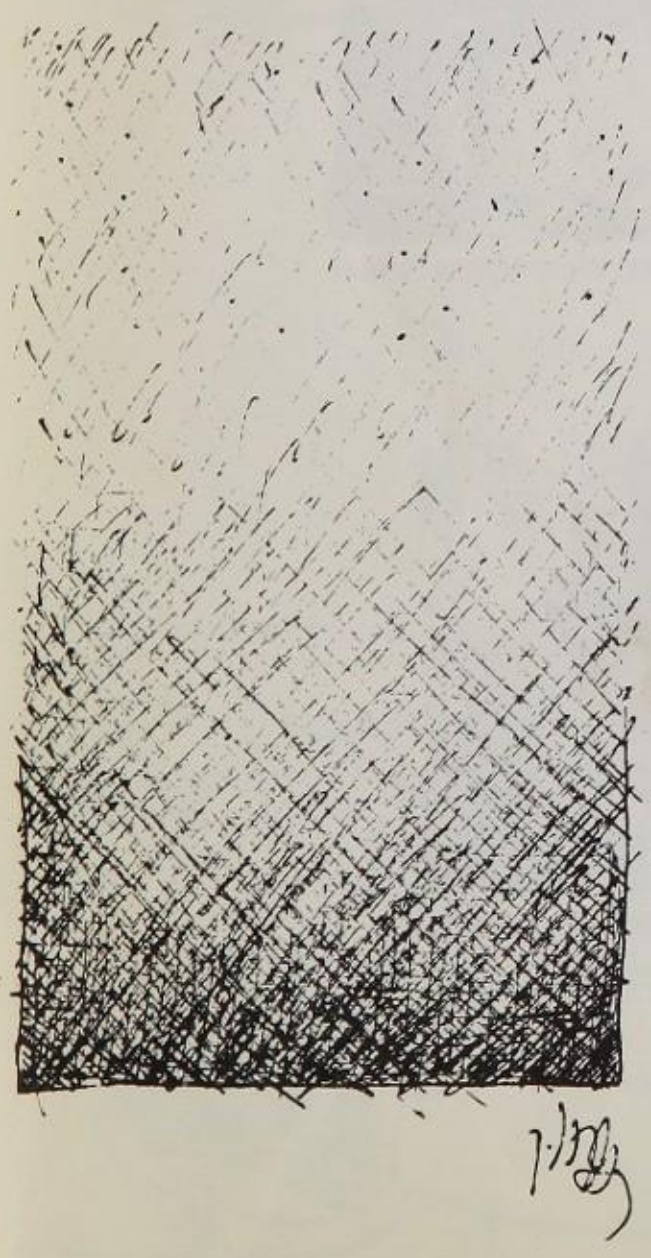
FOR DANNY MILLER







WRITER'S POEM

Ink is a forgetful thing.
Oftimes it wanders aimless across some white snowy terrain lost to the colors that are hidden,
sleeping buds,
beneath.

Absent-minded
it will pass through time and place
and leave its mark
never to set foot there again.
That is the way ink is.
An ice skater
spinning and slipping on shiny white.
It will never retrace its steps,
never remember
who or what or where it was,
will just do it —
place and glide itself
and end
and it is over.
Once written
it is done, it is over.

The Huge Tree

by Katy Champlin

I am going to reach the top branch.
My heart takes a deep breath and I begin climbing, climbing, climbing.
I lose my balance and grasp on to the nearest branch it breaks and I fall but catch on to another branch and pull myself back up climbing again, but this time with trembling hands.
The top branch is right there and I reach up straining every muscle in my body and my heart beating intenseley I pull harder and harder and squint my eyes and grit my teeth with my unsure feet hugging the branch below them.
All to grasp that branch I must go farther so I can reach that beautiful, glorious branch I pull and push and go up and up shaking when I look down but at last, I think, I can reach it.
The tension running through me causes tears to appear from my eyes and as they crudle on my cheeks I grasp that branch strong and hard but the worms cause it to crumble in my hand.

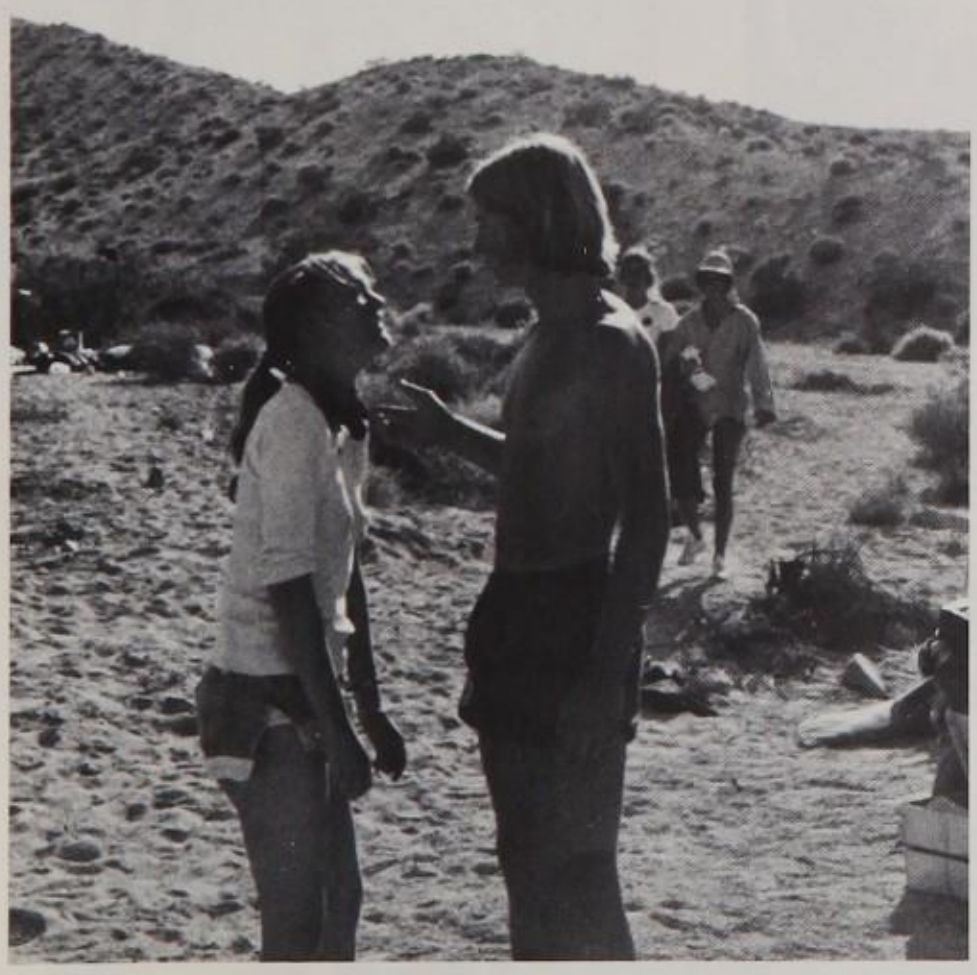
11th GRADE DESERT TRIP — SPRING 1978



PAINTING AND STRUCTURES

in search of your face

I lost your face today.
I wept this morning for the loss.

The few photos were already too familiar for reminding.

I went searching tonight for your face. I drove to your house, parked, stood about, hid from the shadow of some man, perhaps your father.

The FOR SALE sign hung there, dankly too.

And I did not find your face. Or you even.
(I did although find a small rain-sodden block of hairy wood.
It smells sweet, I took it home.)

— Todd Haynes, 1978

Abandoned

The shoes were empty, the wood floor cold,
the soup still steaming, and the stove still warm.

SUMMER TRIP TO EUROPE

ASSEMBLIES

SENIOR PAGES

The thought of what once was and what now is sends tears to flow from my eyes. He still remains yet he is no longer him but a mere by-product of the end.

Companions, best friends from birth, it pains me to look at his diminishing nobility. The painful emotion expressed through his eyes blanket my face with anxiety for somehow he and I both sense the end is near.

What he has always stood for, the pride and nobleness which he once effortlessly expressed have been the standards, the goals of my life. He still stands tall, painfully, proudly. Even I now stand taller, his gift to me.

I parented him in the coldness of the night, he parented me in the midst of my mind's utter-most confusion. We played, romped and made the most of our lives till his sudden downfall. Our love for each other remained and in fact grew stronger.

When the end comes, the memories of Caesar will not fade and though he might not be visible here on Earth, he and I will still meet, for the memories of Caesar will always be embedded, deep, in the eye of my mind.

"A big cat saw a little cat chasing its tail and asked,
"Why are you chasing your tail so?"
Said the kitten,
"I have learned that the best thing for a cat is happiness, and that happiness is my tail. Therefore, I am chasing it: and when I catch it, I shall have happiness."

Said the old cat:
"My son, I too have paid attention to the problems of the universe. I too have judged that my happiness is in my tail. But I have noticed that whenever I chase after it, it keeps running away from me, and when I go about my business, it just seems to come after me wherever I go."

SPIDER WOMAN

"On 'Innocence', A child's portrait, by William Adolphe Bourguereau"

Innocence
Innocence is in her eyes Her blue on blue crystal blue grey-blue eyes

Hair
a halo of gold wisp
gold threads
gold cloud.

She shows no surprise at seeing me in army pants with borrowed father's shirt too big in little checks.
Earnestly scribbling wisp or strand of hair pushed aside to look once more at her eyes limpid and at home in their dimension.
She looks demure
But little girls do not spend their days indoors if they can help it.

I wonder what she did that day the portrait day the day he painted gold on blue on porcelain.
Innocence.
— Sue Etlinger

Things are stange when people change And new things come to pass And life's illusions met and matched Reflected in the glass Seem alive.
We often thrive on battles that we've won And times we said the things we meant Forgetting what we've done.
Sue Etlinger

The nose, nose.

Dina Feldman

my nose is here for looks - it's queer.
It sits upon my face, a place of prominence - for smelling things that are so sweet,
like roses in the summer heat.
my nose - it knows
just how things goes,
and where things grows,
and how wind blows,
and how doors close,
and silken bows,
and spotted does,
and silver hoes,
how rivers flows,
and enemy foes
and terrible woes
and burlesque shows,
and tennis pros,
and black-wing crows,
and moons that glow
and turtles slow
and highs and lows.
my nose
it knows - don't you suppose?

Poem

"Poetry is for the songs that are too high for me to sing."

Faded memories -

Dina Feldman

so days go by - and I try to find some recognition of myself in photographs...
dog-eared
and crumbling.
and I sometimes remember the eyes that stare back at me.
Although parts of me
are foreign to me, I know I am looking at myself.
Look at me now in the mirror, and then -
when I am old...
I will look back on now, and think myself foreign How strange it is to be alien to one's self.

Poem: About a Day After It Rains

All seems brighter Colours sing in,
glow outward.

Trees and mud
are moist,
scented.

Stone and concrete
are dry,
warm from the sun.

Painted houses have fresh wet coats

And the sky,
no longer fierce,
puts forth.
Crimson,
Violet,
Blue,

a rainbow.

April, come she will When streams are ripe and swelled with rain May, she will stay Resting in my arms again June, she'll change her tune In restless walks she'll prowl the night July, she will fly
And give no warning to her flight August, die she must
The autumn winds grow chilly and cold September, I'll remember A love once new has grown old."

Dear Mimi:

I ~~in~~ did not get my Senior Page in on time because of the following reason: As you know I've been working on the play and friday night on the way to the cast party my car broke down for reasons (i) will not mention I was unable to cope with sityation so Angela rescued me by picking me up and taking me to the party where I remained til sunday (it was a lively party) and sunday I had to go to basketball practice and I dislocated my shoulder and was in the hospital for 7 hours and when I got home (wearing a sling) I found out my Aunt had died so I had to babysit my ~~bro~~ little ~~bfxxhf~~ brother and he peed on my page (which was already done) and I couldn't do it monday because I had to go and buy a new car in the afternoon and I had to go to a bored meeting at ~~night~~ Knight then I had to go to midnight show of eraserhead at the ~~n~~ Nuart with Chris and Celia and if it makes you feel better I'm sending this same letter to The editor of the Gorilla, Larry, Chris and also Debbie Pinto
